9:00 - 10:00 AM	Opening Keynote Session in the Ballroom: Jamie LaRue, Intentionally Transformational We know that libraries transform lives, themselves, and their communities. Often though, it's an accident, a happy but unplanned result. What would it look like if we became transformational by design, if we adopted practices and systems that made transformation not just possible, but inevitable?

12:30 - 1:15 PM	Keynote Speaker in the Ballroom: Voices of Navajo Mothers and Daughters; Portraits of Beauty: Kathy Eckles Hooker, author; Arlinda Swatts, Lolita Paddock, Amy Begay, Lisa Puente Siyuja In these compelling, multi-generational oral histories collected by Kathy Eckles Hooker, women talk about their experiences in their own words. As they do, their faces are captured in defining portraits by photographer David Young-Wolff, whose evocative portraits demonstrate the insights gleaned from his 45-year career as one of America's top producers of stock and portrait photography. This panelist session features the author and five women from the book. The women will talk about how they got involved with the project and what they thought about it (then and now), and about what messages they hope the book will convey to readers, particularly the next generation(s) of Navajo women.

She wrote her 2013 children's book, Meet ClaraBelle Blue, after searching fruitlessly for a children's book that adequately and appropriately represented her Afro-Latinx daughter with special needs. The subject of the Emmy Award-winning documentary The Full Nelson, Adiba is a highly acclaimed speaker and in 2017 delivered a TEDx talk to a sold-out house on what to do when life throws you a curveball. As the curveballs keep coming, Nelson continues to write.
